

Permission to reproduce tables and figures

GRS Writing Group – WED 19 APR

In the end, scientific publishing is a business and no matter the model a publisher chooses, that business is based on copyright.

Bailey. 2014. Why Copyright Matters in Research. iThenticate Plagiarism Blog

Do you have any copyright concerns with regard to the use of tables and figures in your thesis? Do you see copyright as an ethical or legal issue?

- If someone else created the original table or figure - seek permission from the author or rights holder.
- If you created the table or figure - you are the rights holder unless you have assigned it to someone else OR You have photographed something in which the rights are owned by someone else. [If the image is a photograph of people - you may need formal permission to use the photo in the digital thesis, unless the individuals are incidental to the photo. Consideration may also need to be given to photographs of minors, deceased persons, or images of a sensitive nature].

UWA Lib Guide Copyright and Higher Degree Theses: Using third party material in your thesis - Obtaining copyright permission

- Go to the source of the work to see if there is a license which specifies conditions of use.
- If you can't find a clear copyright owner, contact the publisher for clarification.
- If permission is required, check if the publisher or owner has provided an online form, otherwise make your request using a permission letter. The publisher typically has the exclusive right to grant the permission whether or not copyright is owned by the publisher.
- When requesting permission, clearly state how much of the work you wish to include and that the thesis will be used for non-commercial research purposes.
- If permission is granted subject to a contract or requiring a fee, and you are either unwilling to pay or sign, you can seek further advice from the University Library Copyright Librarian [Ms Chloe Czerwiec, UWA Senior Librarian (Copyright), or email copyright-lib@uwa.edu.au]
- If permission is not granted you will need to remove the work from your thesis.

If permission has been granted it is important that you adhere to the UWA Code of Conduct for the Responsible Practice of Research. Ensure that you;

- record and store the documentation as proof of copyright compliance
- adhere to the copyright owner's conditions of use
- acknowledge the copyright owner and the source of the material through accurate

Example of what Elsevier requires when reproducing an image from their publications:

Reprinted from Publication Title, Vol /Edition number, Author(s), Title of article / title of chapter, Pages No, Copyright (Year), with permission from Elsevier.

Some useful resources

University of Leicester have a few 'rules of thumb' with regard to use of images here

23 Research Things - Thing 10: Finding and using online photos and images

Duration of copyright is often life of author plus 70 years. Further information is available here

Major publishing houses instructions on how to obtain permissions:

- Elsevier - Obtaining permission to use content on ScienceDirect
- Springer – Obtaining permissions
- Wiley – Permissions
- Taylor & Francis – Rights & Permissions - Journals
- SAGE – Journal permissions

Vaughn .2013. Copyright Law on the Internet Is a Total Train Wreck Right Now. Hubspot.

<https://blog.hubspot.com/marketing/internet-copyright-law-failure#sm.0001cdhc513k8d681083amwon0yub>

Next session: May 10 First and Third Person in Academic Writing

Further details of the UWA GRS Writing Group, including advice sheets to download, here:

www.postgraduate.uwa.edu.au/students/resources/communities#writinggroup